Pre-Appeal Brief Request

1. In response to the Pre-Appeal Brief Request filled on 04/03/09, PROSECUTION IS HEREBY REOPENED. A new ground of rejection is set forth below.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

2. The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

3. Claims 41, 43, 44, 50-58, 68 and 69 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention. Regarding claim 41, "a counterweight, which is axially displaced in the opposite direction from the cutting blade" is confusing. It is not clear what "the opposite direction from the cutting blade" means. Is cutting blade moves in an opposite direction than the counterweight? What is considered to be the direction of the cutting blade? It is not clear what direction is the direction of the cutting blade. In addition, "the direction of the cutting blade" lacks antecedent basis. Similarly, claims 50 and 53 should be changed as claim 41.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

- 4. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:
  - a person shall be entitled to a patent unless –
  - (b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.
- 5. Claims 41, 43-44, 50-54 and 68-69 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Urschel et al. (2,621,692), hereinafter Urschel. Regarding claim 41, Urschel teaches a slicing machine including a rotating cutting blade 15, which is mounted so as to be displaceable parallel to a rotation axis of rotation of the blade. Urschel also teaches that the slicing machine also includes a counterweight "CW" which is axially displaced in the opposite direction from the cutting blade 15. See Figs. 1-6 and col. 5, lines 43-60 and col. 7, lines 1-39 in Urschel.

Regarding claims 43-44 and 68-69, Urschel teaches everything noted above including that the displacement of the cutting blade 15 takes place independently of a rotational speed of the cutting blade; the cutting blade 15 is mounted to a drive shaft 85 so as to be displaced along the drive shaft 85; the cutting gap also could be adjusted when the blade is stationary or rotating; and the axial position of the blade is not substantially changed after it has come onto contact with an adjusting limit stop. It should be noted that the zero position of the axial position of the blade is shown in Fig. 4, when the blade is not rotated. However, the rotation of the shaft facilitates movement of the blade upwardly by the counter weight from the zero position.

Regarding claims 50-52, Urschel teaches everything noted above including a method for axial displacement of the cutting blade 15 during operation. Urschel also teaches a counterweight "WC" on a drive shaft 85 of the cutting blade 15 is displaced in the opposite direction from the cutting blade 15. It should be noted that the counterweight is axially displaced on the drive shaft via lever 102. Urschel also teaches that the displacement of the counterweight and the cutting blade are synchronously. Urschel also teaches that the displacement of the cutting blade 15 or the counterweight is achieved by a spindle 91.

Regarding claims 53-54, Urschel teaches everything noted above including a method of using at least one counterweight "WC" in a slicing machine including the steps of displacing the at least one counterweight "WC" in the opposite direction from a cutting blade 15 to stabilize running of the cutting blade of a slicing machine, wherein the cutting blade includes an axis of rotation, and the cutting blade is mounted so as to be displaceable parallel to the rotation axis of the blade. In addition, Urschel also teaches that the forces and/or movements arising during displacement of the blade are compensated.

6. Claim 50, as best understood, is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Wodack et al. (2,175,499), hereinafter Woodack. Regarding claim 50, Wodack teaches a method for displacement of a cutting blade 11 during operation of a slicing machine, comprising the steps of axially displacing a counterweight 34 on a drive shaft 37 of the cutting blade 11 in an opposite direction from the cutting blade. See Figs. 1-2, page 2, col. 1, lines 1-14. It should be noted that the counterweight 34 could be shafted in an opposite direction that the backward or forward direction of direction of the blade 11.

Response to Amendment

7. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 41, m50 and 53 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

Conclusion

8. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

Fleming (3,874,605), Gardner (1,797,646), Lavis (4,163,404) and Martignone (2,525,557) teach an apparatus including a rotating blade and a counterweight.
